Sharon "-March Scribner.] Once arrived in New Sharon, the herder, or "cow-boy" dominates the town. He is no longer the easy-going, mild-demeanored type of native Texan languor and the anomalous self-repression of the trail; he "turus loose," as the cells it and appears to change his he calls it, and appears to change his disposition in the act of shifting his garments, so rapidly does he challenge every restraint of society, and sound every depth of vice and shame. Persight of civilization, after so much of the desert and its high haunting sky, stuns and dazes his moral nature: or possibly it is but the assertion, under tempting conditions, of that latent and solution what it may, the fact is glaring that he no sooner reaches the town than he is straightway seized by some occult and masterful influence which transforms him like a new creation. With the first approach of darkness, the lethargic town rubbed its eyes, so to speak, and leaped to its feet-and in a twinkling, it seemed (like an incantation, Eastman said), Grand Avenue was a carnival of light, and motion, and music. The broad board sidewalks were crowded with promenaders; smiling groups passed in and out of the drinking-saloons and gambling-places; in every quarter glasses clinked and dice rattled (is there another sound in the world like that of shaken dice?); violins, flutes and cornets sent out eager, inviting strains of waltz and polka from a score or wore establishments, and a brass band was playing patriotic airs in front of the theater, where, oddly enough. the crude morality of "Ten Nights in a was about to be presented, "with the full strength of the company in the cast." Everywhere the cow-boys made themselves manifest, clad now in the soiled and dingy jeans of the trail, then in a suit of many-buttoned cordurey, and again in affluence of broadcloth, silk hat, gloves, cane, and sometimes a clerical white neck-tie. # A New Indian Policy Proposed.

Washington, Feb. 28.

The Senate Committee on indian Affairs at a long special meeting to day agreed to report for passage an original bill designed to cover the entire range of the Indian question, by the emactment of various new provisions, based upon the general principle that the United states should in agreat measure abandon the policy of treating Indians as children, and place them as speedily as possible upon the footing of citizens. The main features of the plan outlined by the committee are:

First—Permanent localization of the Indians by allotting homestends to them in severality, with provisions that lands so allotted shall be absointely inalienable during a period of twenty-five years.

be absolutely inalicuable during a period of twenty-five years.

Second—Extersion over the Indians of the general, civil and criminal laws of the United States, or of the respective States and Torritories within whose border they are located. Third—Continuation of certain degrees of assistance to them by the Government in the line of progress towards civilization, until they become self-sustaining by means of agricultural and pastoral occupation.

It is not proposed by the committee to transfer control of the Indians to the War Department, but the bill will hargely divest the Interior Department of discretionary power in regard to Indians by placing them individually under control of the control of the order of the Indians of the Indians Indians and Indians of the lift are not to apply to the two vivilized tribes of the Indian Territory. Its details will be subjects for consideraion at luture meetings. Col. ## ASSECULTURAL NOTES.

Surprience boos belong to sheep, Keep them out of the cow herd.

Many dairymen want cows that they can turn to beef when they are old and our American life, says Robert Collyer, worthless. Would any same man buy such cows, and attempt to fatten them To get all the butter from it, cream not favor polled cattle, in view of the damage horns do in a herd. The Jersey and Short-horn could readily be bred polled, and among our natives there is a fair per cent, of polled cattle, while without horns. FARMERS who spread on a thin coat of twelve or titteen loads of manure to the acre, and expect to raise a good crop, would be astonished to see the mant ties of the best kinds of mannie which market gardeners often apply to an acre of land near the cities. would they say to the application of six hundred dollars' worth of horse manure to a single acre? Two or three hundred dellars' worth of manure per acre is a common thing among market gardeners, and they find their account in so doing, too. DR J PREVOST has found that rain removes much more matter from an uncropped than a cropped soil. He placed three inches of soil in two glazed earthenware pans seventeen inches in diameter. Four grammes of white clover seed were sown in one of the pans, and the other was left without any stimulus to vegetation. Both pans were exposed from July 21 to October 4, and then the drainage water was collected and analyzed with results which warranted the above conclusion. A MAINE farmer gives the following opinion as to the best position to plant an orchard: "Were I to plant an orchard and had two locations—one in a valley, surrounded by hills, except on the south side, and the other on a high elevation, exposed to high winds-I would choose the latter in preference to the former. The same holds good in regard to peach orchards. A great object is to keep back the blooming as long as possible, and this can best be done in northern exposures without shelter."

To Test the Richness of Milk: Procure any long glass vessel—a cologne bottle or phial. Take a narrow strip of paper, just the length from the neck to he bottom; then mark it off with 100 lines at equal distances, or into fifty ines and count each as two, and paste upon the phial so as to divide into a undred equal parts. Fill it to the highest mark with milk fresh from the ow and allow it to stand in a perpendicular position for twenty-four The number of spaces occupied by the eream will give you its exact percentage without any guesswork.

Dr. LEFFMAN, the microscopist of the Pennsylvania Board of Agriculture, who has been examining into the causes of "ropy" milk, thinks the primary trouble is in the animal furnishing the milk. The oil globules are changed; the albuminous covering becomes adhesive, perhaps by partial decomposition. Prof. James Law has a similar belief. But Mr. X. A. Willard thinks it is due to weeds, bad water, and bad treatment of the cows; and Prof. Englehart once said he knew it was a weed Dr. Leffman has known it to stop when cows were changed from good to had water; and as for weeds the disease appears at all times.

THE best soil for wheat is where clay predominates. A mixture of sand and clay is the best soil for a succession of crops, and sand for a bright, stiff straw, but too sandy a soil is too porous for wheat, although good spring wheat is frequently grown on sandy soils. Muck is not well adapted for the growth of the robes over the skirt of her mother's wheat, but where the land is rich wheat will succeed on a variety of soils.
